DARREN CRISS

Photographer: Joseph Sinclair
Stylist: Krishan Parmar
Writer: Jackie Fernandez
Location: Ten Bells Shoreditch

In a career-making role garnering critical acclaim and awards show buzz, Glee alum, Darren Criss, returns to TV playing real-life serial killer Andrew Cunanan in FX's American Crime Story: The Assassination of Gianni Versace. It's a part tailor-made for Criss who shares the same look, age range, and ethnicity as Cunanan; but playing a role so heavily influenced by race has forced Criss to examine his own identity and reclaim what being a Filipino-American means to him.

Darren Criss is a deeply private person. I learn this quickly while waiting to talk to him. He had just got back to LA from The Met Ball and was getting ready to leave for Australia to do press for American Crime Story: The Assassination of Gianni Versace, but not before coming home to celebrate a pretty big weekend.

"Really quick, my parents were supposed to get here an hour and a half ago, and so of course, just as this is about to start they're gonna knock on the door and say, 'now,' he says a bit frantic apologizing for having to interrupt the interview when they arrive.

"No problem, they're on Filipino time," I say jokingly to alleviate any worry, as I too am Filipino, and know how notoriously late. Criss laughs and is put at ease regarding our shared cultural background.

"I'm so weird about talking about my personal life, but adding that he's very protective of his parents who come over to celebrate both Mother's Day and their birthday. Deep down, I'm a sentiment hoarder. If something happens to me I don't want to share it with the rest of the world. Meaning you won't see posts from him about the party, or them, his fiancé's engagement ring, or his favorite food."

TOM BRITTNEY

TOM BRITTNEY IS SET TO CAUSE A STIR IN THE SLEEPY VILLAGE OF GRANTCHESTER WHERE HE TAKES ON THE ROLE OF REBEL-WITH-A-CAUSE, CRIME-DETECTING VICAR WILL DAVENPORT.

However, he is soon to swap the comfort of the English countryside for the North Atlantic in the midst of war in upcoming biopic Greyhound which is produced, written and starring Hollywood treasure Tom Hanks. We meet Brittney at Graphic bar in Soho where he reveals to us which anxieties he shares with Tom Hanks.

Do you think you could do the job if you weren't an atheist actor? Well, apart from not being religious, I do like to listen to people. I like to try and help them out so I think I would be okay at it. Will has taught me some things about human interaction and how to help people.

In what ways will your character be shaking things up in the village? Will is very different to Sidney, even the little things like Sidney rides a bicycle but Will rides a motorbike, wears a leather jacket and boxes in his spare time. Will is a very fiercely passionate young vicar who wants to use that passion to help people, but sometimes that comes out in the wrong way and some people aren't quite ready for change in the village.

Will also has quite a dark, hidden past. Is there going to be a controversial reveal? Yes, there is! The thing that drives him comes out and he's running away from something that happened in his life. You'll see bits and pieces of that come out.

all Scottish & India too Tiger of Sweden shoes Chergate

Were you a fan of the detective genre before Grantchester? I love them! Who doesn't love a good murder mystery? One of my favourite shows is Luther and the American ones too, they have all these twists and turns. You come back for more even if more people die! I grew up watching CSI with my Mum and I loved it in the '90s and noughties. I love dark dramas.

Do you ever try to solve the mystery yourself before reading the end of the script? Oh yeah, definitely! There have been many times when I would have never seen the ending coming and I would be in my character's head, but often go in the wrong direction. We're all trying to figure out what's going on like 'oh, it was him'. There have been many times when I have been shocked by the ending myself which is brilliant! I also had to get really good at my 'thinking face'.

You'll also be starring alongside Tom Hanks in World War II biopic Greyhound. Did you two get up to much behind the scenes? I wish we had. When I got the call that I would be working with Tom Hanks, my first thought was 'he's going to become my new best friend, we'll have drinks and hear all the stories about all the things!' The thing is though Tom wrote the film, he produced it and was starring in it. Every day he came on set, he did his job and he would go back - he lived on his own at the time - so I never really saw him. He did come to a barbeque! He is such a hard-worker, he didn't give himself time to relax. On set between takes he did have fun and he would tell us stories about Saving Private Ryan and doing impressions of himself. We would hear him on the port side of the ship that we were filming on, suddenly

all New & Longwood by Scotch & Soda

What did he bring along to the barbeque? He brought some beers! He brought a six-pack of beers and just his good self.

Did he change your approach to acting? The thing I realised watching him was that he was the same as everyone else. He was worried about his performance and he was worried about things that I worry about. He goes about things like everybody else does, you'll do a day's work and then I was rubbish'. Actually, although it sounds said that the worries and insecurities never go away it was quite refreshing that he still has that drive to work hard. You hear about some actors that become lazy and just do it for the pay cheque but he is still so passionate about his job. That's what I learnt from him is that there is never any excuse to not be a professional and be nice. Being nice is the main thing, although he's worth like half a billion dollars. Always do as a job is pretend to be other people, we're going on set running around on a fake boat pretending to be American sailors. If I start being a nasty person that just doesn't make sense. No one has the right to be that, maybe just a brain surgeon, if he just operated on someone and saved a person's life I would maybe let
